Toensing Sworn In

Victoria Toensing, former chief counsel to the Senate Intelligence Committee, was sworn in last week as deputy assistant attorney general, criminal division—the first woman to hold that post. Toensing, a former federal prosecutor in Detroit, will be in charge of the department's prosecutions in the areas of fraud, general crimes and in criminal appeals.

At a ceremony at the department attended by officials from Justice, Capitol Hill and the intelligence community, Toensing took her oath of office. Just to keep things in the family she had her husband, U.S. Attorney Joseph E. diGenova, administer the oath.
